The score given for General English proficiency suggests that the candidate:

- A. Should have no difficulty in following seminars, practical training and academic programs both locally and overseas.
- B. Should be capable of following seminar, short-term courses, and practical training but would require a brief period of orientation in an English speaking environment before enrolling in an academic program.
- C. Should be able to benefit from most practical training programs and seminars. The candidate would, however, require between 100 to 200 hours of intensive English course before enrolling in a regular academic program.
- D. Require between 150 to 350 hours of English instruction, depending on personal aptitude and the type of training proposed.
- E. Should take a comprehensive course in English and be retested before recommendation for a training program.

TOEFL Prediction is based on the candidate's objective test scores. Most academic program require 550 or more on TOEFL.
